

Making Practice-Focused Research Happen in a Busy Clinical World: Moving from Good Ideas to Funded Studies

A full-day Masterclass seminar for Nurses and Allied Health Professionals from Professor Philip Darbyshire

Wednesday 11 November 9.30am-4.30pm
Lecture Theatre, The Cancer Research UK Cambridge Research Institute, Addenbrooke's Hospital

“Very inspirational, my mind is buzzing with research questions”

“This study day should be made compulsory for all nurses”

“Inspiring – made me think I could make it happen”

“A speaker who was able to reveal the exciting side of research”

Philip Darbyshire was formerly Professor of Nursing at Women's & Children's Hospital, University of South Australia and Flinders University in Adelaide, and is an Adjunct Professor at the University of Western Sydney. He has won over a million dollars in research grant funding, and now helps organisations get research out of the 'too hard basket' and into the hearts, heads and hands of staff who use it make a real difference.

A Masterclass seminar that isn't just a study day—but a turning point for your thinking and practice.

In this seminar, Professor Philip Darbyshire will describe the practical strategies and approaches that can turn a good idea or an interesting clinical practice question into a funded, happening study that benefits everyone.

Seminar content:

- Practical and achievable ways of fitting research into your clinical practice
- How to find a good research question or project
- The vital importance of money and funding – and how to get it!
- How to begin to develop a 'research culture'
- Why two or more heads are better than one – collaborative research
- How writing a grant proposal can develop clinical research
- Why a rejected proposal is never a failure
- Getting your project started
- Sustainability - how to achieve more than just a 'one-off' project.
